FOLIAGE

I like the richer colored flowers and disease resistance of this favorite butterfly plant. The hairy, mint-like foliage is very mildew resistant and has a spicy fragrance, along with raspberry colored flowers in July-August. I find that this perennial is perfect for naturalizing in the perennial border or rambling in the cottage garden. The flowers attract butterflies and hummingbirds, and are superb in cut flower arrangements; while the foliage is often used in teas. Grow in rich, moist soil in full sun to part shade. Feed with a liquid or slow release fertilizer. This plant is hardy in zone 4.
