Spring Symphony is at the top of my list if you're looking for an easy to grow, shade tolerant plant. The pale pink flowers have a light fragrance and bloom in May to June, with repeat blooms later in the season. The spikes of stary flowers capture filtered sunlight, illuminating shady woodland settings. This foamflower has green, deeply cut foliage that resembles turkey feet and is painted with black along the midrib. The dramatic coloration of the foliage will be more pronounced in cooler weather. The small, densely packed clumps are perfect in shady perennial borders. It can also be used as edging or as a groundcover. Plant this foamflower in part to full shade in rich, moist soil. It is hardy in Zones 3-8.
